Virginia Association of Wetland Professionals

ABOUT VAWP

The Virginia Association of Wetland Professionals (VAWP) is a state-wide organization that was established to unite wetlands scientists, regulators, managers, design professionals, attorneys and other wetland and environmental science professionals in an independent forum that promotes the discussion and exchange of ideas on wetlands and other environmental science issues important in Virginia. While the original focus of VAWP was wetland science, the group has expanded to include all environmental sciences. Topics include: improving the effectiveness and efficiency of wetlands management through the development and operation of certification programs, training and education in wetland delineation, functional assessment, best management practices, mitigation and other areas; encouraging improved public and private partnerships, planning and protection of wetlands based on the best available science, technology and engineering practices; encouraging the conservation and responsible use of wetlands and other natural resources; and encouraging and promoting continued research and public education in the area of wetland functions and values and environmental science.
